*A Loan Exhibition organized by

April 30 - May 24, 1964

THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART, WASHINGTON, D.C.

preface

This exhibition was originally conceived by The Friends of The Corcoran as a modest effort devoted to showing some thirty fine examples of contemporary art owned in Washington. As time went on it became obvious from the unexpected richness of local collections that a second gallery must be added and, finally, two more small galleries were needed to house even a relatively small percentage of the treasures that were discovered.

The research and the selection of the individual works in the exhibition as well as preparation of this catalogue, was entrusted by the Friends solely to Mrs. Meda Sokolova Mladek. To Mrs. Mladek is due full credit and responsibility for the often difficult choices that had to be made. The organization of an exhibition of this type is a time consuming operation and I can vouch for the long hours which have gone into its organization on her part. Many collections were visited not once but several times, and as the material available was studied the scope of the exhibition was gradually changed to cover not only contemporary art, but its immediate precursors as well.

We appreciate the generosity with which the owners of the works of art, catalogued herein, have responded to the requests of the Friends for the loan of some of their treasured possessions, and I am sure that the Washington community will find the exhibition richly rewarding.

THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART

The Friends of The Corcoran is an organization dedicated to encouraging the private collecting of contemporary art by developing an interest in such art, and to purchasing works of art for the permanent collection of The Corcoran Gallery of Art. Its membership is composed of unselfish individuals who in their role as purchasers of art for the Corcoran Gallery, are fully cognizant of their responsibility to the Gallery, to the artists and to the community both local and national. This is accomplished within a democratic framework that allows the general membership to elect not only the directors and officers but also a large part of the acquisitions committee. And once each year the members have the right to vote upon a choice from among a group of works selected by its acquisitions committee approved by the staff at the Gallery.

The Friends of The Corcoran are particularly proud to exhibit to the community this carefully selected group of paintings and sculpture from private Washington collections. These works demonstrate not only the characteristic artistry of the painter and sculptor but also the good taste and discernment of the various collectors.

We have assembled for the viewer an exhibition which has an intangible quality not ordinarily available in a show brought together from the musty walls of different museums or dealers' racks. Like a fine strand of pearls which grows more lustrous when worn, these paintings all have the warm glow of having been cherished and loved in a setting of home and family.

Because all of these paintings come from private collectors, we owe a special debt of gratitude to the lenders. Each of these loans means a bare wall in a living or dining room and some beautiful arrangement completely upset. I trust that the joy to the viewer will in some measure compensate for the sacrifice and inconvenience to the lenders.

We are indebted to Mrs. Meda Sokolova Mladek for her tireless effort in assembling the exhibition. We know that for her this has been a labour of love. We also want to thank Mrs. Bernhard Bechhoefer for her unusual contribution of time and effort in helping to organize the exhibition, and Mr. Hermann W. Williams, Jr. for his kind cooperation.

The Friends of the Corcoran

introduction

The name which the Friends of the Corcoran Gallery have chosen for this exhibition covers a period of over 90 years marked by a variety in art greater than has ever before been known, prolific in schools and individual ventures, filled with art revolutions and counter-revolutions, blessed with courage and originality, and—inevitably—suffering also from pretense and foolishness. To assemble from private collections of one city a complete image of the evolution of modern art is impossible for the simple reason that in any single city certain schools and certain artists are absent from the collections. The task of assembling a historically satisfactory selection was rendered even more difficult in Washington by severe time limitations: roughly two months were available for viewing the collections, for selecting and cataloguing. About 70 collections were visited and close to 1,000 works examined. There are undoubtedly other collections which would have yielded several worthwhile examples of modern art. Alas, it was impossible to approach them before the expiration of the time limit. Yet, while the catalog shows some obvious historical gaps, a great many schools have been found to be represented in Washington. An effort has been made to bring in as many schools and artists as are justified by the quality of their work. Some painters are represented by gouaches, aquarelles, drawings, provided that their quality is good, in lieu of nonexistent or inadequate canvases. All in all, it was an encouraging experience, going from one collection to another, to discover that Washington is one of the cities where the quality of works of art is very good, better indeed than in a great many larger and richer communities. Certain artists are represented rather abundantly in Washington private collections, and it was a painful task to have to eliminate many excellent works in order to maintain, within the limited space available, a reasonably balanced distribution between various schools.

I owe a debt of gratitude to collectors for their generous response and their willingness to live for more than a month of a busy season between walls marked by empty rectangular shadows. My own compensation for these hectic weeks was the pleasure of having been able to view a great number of good works of art, of which many more than the capacity of this exhibition permits deserve to be shown to the public.

I would also like to thank Mrs. Bernhard Bechhoefer for her enthusiastic and efficient help in organizing the show; Mr. Victor Amato for his admirable and successful effort to produce photographs for the catalog within an exactingly short time. Mr. James M. Cutts disinterestedly undertook the task of constructing partitioning and helping with the installations. Mr. Kurt Wiener's experience and remarkable craftsmanship are responsible for this handsome catalog.
